Two unexpected visitors arrive at a shabby warehouse on the south side of the River Thames. The first is a wealthy nobleman seeking the lover he deserted twenty-one years earlier. Now James Avery has everything to offer: a fortune, a title, and the favor of the newly restored King Charles II. He believes that the warehouse’s poor owner Alinor has the one thing he cannot buy—his son and heir. The second visitor is a beautiful widow from Venice in deepest mourning. She claims Alinor as Alinor writes to him that she knows—without doubt—that her son is alive and the widow is an imposter. But how can she prove it? Convolutional Neural Network and Question Generation Based Approaches to Select Best Answers for Non-Factoid Questions Jul 24 2020 The answer selection task involves selecting the most appropriate answer for a question given a list of answers for the question. The problem tackled in this thesis is a subset of the answer selection task and concentrates on answer selection for non-factoid questions. Non-factoid questions are ones which cannot be answered in a word or phrase. They usually have long answers which do not share a lot of common words with the question.Two methods are discussed in this thesis. First is a Convolutional Neural Network method which creates distributed vector representations for the questions and answers, and learns to minimize the distance (in vector space) between questions and their most-appropriate answers. Second is a question generation approach in which a Seq2Seq model is trained to generate questions from the given answers and the previously discussed CNN is then used to create vector representations of the questions minimizing the distance between the true question and the question generated by the true answer. Answer selection is treated as an information retrieval task and the precision@1 and mean reciprocal rank scores are reported. Evaluation is carried out on two datasets, the Yahoo Webscope L6 which is a standard dataset for the answer selection task and the Library corpus - a custom dataset created by collecting student responses to information literacy questions to earn online micro-credentials. The performance of the CNN model shows improvement in precision@1 scores over state of the art models on the library corpus and shows comparable performance on the Yahoo Answers corpus. The results obtained using the question generation approach are promising and suggest steps for future work.

Answer Key For Linguistics Feb 17 2020 Linguistics: An Introduction to Linguistic Theory is a textbook, written for introductory courses in linguistic theory for undergraduate linguistics majors and first-year graduate students. Twelve major figures in the field bring their expertise to each of the core areas of the field - morphology, syntax, semantics, phonetics, phonology, and language acquisition. In each section the book is concerned with discussing the underlying principles common to all languages, showing how these are revealed in language acquisition and in the specific grammars of the world's languages. Theoretical concepts are introduced through the analysis of a wide set of language data from Arabic to Zulu. The student will learn how to do linguistics by working through real linguistic data. Each section explains how to define and solve a problem; organizes the data into paradigms revealing the structured patterns in the data; formulates generalizations based on these patterns; proposes rules or principles to account for the generalization; seeks independent evidence in its argument for the proposed theoretical construct. The book brings the latest developments in theoretical linguistics to bear in its discussion of the traditional issues. It covers these subjects in greater depth than is found in most introductory texts permitting the student to proceed directly, after using this text, to graduate courses in the field. It contains problems, a glossary, and a bibliography for further reading. Linguistics is supported by an instructor's manual.
